

Sustainability Statement:

Get Out Get Love & Uxclinician Ltd.

Uxclinician Ltd. (parent company for Get Out Get Love) believe that sustainability should be at the heart of everything we do. This includes environmental sustainability, economic sustainability and providing sustainable approaches and methods so our clients continue to benefit from our products and approaches into the long term.

Environmental impact

Product and services

The Get Out Get Love programme™ and the Get Out Empower Others™ staff training programme as provided by UXclinician are digital products. The programmes are hosted online.

At UXclinician, we offer online solutions for clients (individual's, charities, and businesses) and work with teams that are often geographically spread nationally making online working a more sustainable choice.

Our use of technology allows us to minimise travelling for both our team and for clients, as we routinely use online meetings, provide online workshops and give online presentations. Where face to face meetings with clients and partners are necessary (i.e., conferences, whole staff induction /training workshops) we aim to use public transport / car sharing for staff travel.

We host all our documentation online negating the need for hard copies to be printed. Although we can offer printed materials to clients, we generally advocate the use of electronic copies. Where printed materials are necessary we use suppliers who have published environmental and sustainability policies.

Sustainability of our approach

Sustainability of our methods for our clients going forward providing learning and experiences that allow ongoing learning supported by our approach. Our digital products are designed to empower people to create independence from service support, thus reducing the impact on specialist support services and health care providers.

Sustainability for employees

We advocate home and remote working with flexible hours. As such we have no office space but use shared office spaces in the locality when face to face meeting is necessary for our team, aiming to minimise travelling distances for staff to these venues.

Policy Aims

UXclinician Ltd. requires its staff, partners and suppliers to:

- Respect, embrace, and actively support carbon net zero
- Demonstrate commitment to managing, minimising and mitigating the impacts from operations and activities.
- Seek to minimise the environmental impact through environment and climate emergency conscious decision-making including choice of products, partners and suppliers.
- Demonstrate compliance with all relevant legislation as a minimum, and where possible go beyond it.

Future Success Criteria

Products and services

We are working towards creating our own digital platform to host the programme, using a local SME team who share our values.

All current plans for future developments to our products are based on the use of digital technologies with little or no requirements for clients/staff face to face meeting/travel. Where hard copies of materials (training workbooks for staff for example) are necessary these are kept to the absolute minimum, and where practical will be digitised in the future.

Sustainability for employees

As we expand our team, we will continue to support flexible home working, encouraging the use of public transport, local shared office spaces, car sharing and cycle to work when the need to meet in person arises.

Suppliers

We will continue to seek out and use suppliers that have environmentally responsible, economically responsible and sustainable approaches. Working where possible at local level to support the local economy.

Net zero commitment

UXclinician is committed to achieving Net Zero emissions by 2045 for emissions scopes 1, 2, and 3. The commitment was made on 31/07/24 by Dr Craig Newman, CEO.
